WILL LUSITANIA BE THE VICTIM OF GERMAN SUBMARINE?

The Lusitania.

The great British steamship Lusitania is now on her way to England, with scores of Americans, many of them prominent, aboard. Before she left New York mysterious messages were received by at least fifty of her passengers, saying that the vessel would never reach her destination. Do the Germans contemplate torpedoing the vessel?

NEW YORK, May 7.—Ray Brown, one of the big guns on Everybody's magazine, was riding atop a Fifth avenue bus the other Sunday afternoon when a friend with him rushed down the dinky stairway to the street to purchase a Sunday evening newspaper sold by the leather lunged newsies.

The most trivial news event is heralded to the world in screeching headlines—the kind of type that cannot be kept in cases but in sacks. When the friend returned with his paper, Brown inquired why he was so foolish to squander his money on such a proposition.

The friend then told of a gambler who was once seen coming out of a faro house in Laramie. A man who saw him said:

"Don't you know that game's crooked?"

"Sure I do," was the answer, "But it's the only one in town."

Many People In This Town never really enjoyed a meal until we advised them to take a

Up at Broadway and 106th street a statue was recently unveiled and Maxilian Foster writes to the Tribune to know if the statue was of "Statuary Taking the Count." The reply was: "Not it at all. It is 'Sculpture Defying the Consequences!'"

Down on Park Row at a luncheon the other day some newspapermen were discussing pro and con the Frank case and its relation to justice. The incident so impressed a humorist present that he went back to his office and wrote the following:

We don't know whether Leo Frank killed Mary Phagan, but there seems to be no doubt of the fact that Harry K. Thaw shot Stanford White. By the way, the date of Harry's next trial will be announced shortly.

John Bunny left a comfortable fortune to his widow, who lives in Flatbush. Not until 1910 did he ever make as much as $100 a week, but when he went into the films his salary immediately jumped to $500 a week and his royalty amounted to more than that. He made hay while the sun was shining.

When Bunny went to England three years ago he said he did not believe he personally knew a soul in the islands. But when he walked the streets of London the attention he created was as great as in New York. "There's funny Bunny," they would say as they fell into the procession that constantly dogged his footsteps all over England. His son John Bunny, Jr., has aspirations to be a film star.

Jack Doyle, the Forty-second street pool expert, has received a letter from Tod Sloan, the famous jockey, who states that he is in the hospital corps of the French army. Before the war began, Tod was running Milton Henry's cafe in Paris.

Fate has played many an odd prank with the career of Tod Sloan. The rise and decline of his fortune forms the greatest romance that the sport of kings has known in all its history. Doyle, who was his most intimate friend, says that at one time Sloan was worth more than a million dollars. A few years later he was in bankruptcy. He first attracted attention as a jockey by riding on the coast for Pittsburgh, Phil. He later came east and made a fortune and when he rode for Lord Beresford he became a pet of nobility.

He was unable in his last years to get a license in England or France and also was practically barred in America. The trouble was over some race in France.
